SACRAMENTO , CA, UNITED STATES, May 7, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- A proposal to eliminate the California state sales tax on diapers and feminine hygiene products, announced today by Gov. While ending sales taxes on these basic necessities benefits all Californians who use these products, the meaningful savings will benefit individuals and families living in poverty the most."

The organizations distribute donated diapers and period products, respectively, to community-based programs serving individuals and families who struggle to access basic necessities.

"We applaud Gov. Newsom's plan to end sales taxes on diapers and period products," said Joanne Goldblum, CEO, National Diaper Bank Network. "Basic necessities should never be taxed, especially those required to maintain the good health of babies, mothers, and all individuals who menstruate."

"Sales taxes are regressive and disproportionately impact low-wage earners and those living poverty. We know that one in three U.S. families struggles to provide enough diapers to keep their baby clean, dry and healthy—a hidden consequence of poverty known as diaper need. We also know that one in four U.S. women reports struggling to purchase period products in the past year. While ending sales taxes on these basic necessities benefits all Californians who use these products, the meaningful savings will benefit individuals and families living in poverty the most."
