

EvolveWare Launches Subscription Based Pricing

Subscription based pricing means organizations can use the complete suite of Intellisys™ tools and only pay for the services they actually use.

SANTA CLARA , CALIFORNIA, USA, May 14, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- EvolveWare Inc., a leader in application modernization, today announced the availability of its Intellisys Platform as a subscription-based service. This is a solution that allows customers and partners to manage the application life cycle without being committed to a contract.

One of the problems many clients describe is the fact of "so many choices" in terms of pricing where the differentiators are difficult to articulate for each one of the offerings.

EvolveWare's new pricing model overcomes this issue and the need for organizations to commit to long term contracts when they only have a short-term contract.

Many organizations are looking at the need to execute application rationalization and modernization projects but are being held back by the cost of the tools necessary to automate those activities. This is particularly true when independent research shows that around 70% of organizations did not have published or referenceable documentation on the current version of their application portfolio. Therefore, the resources required to even start those projects is seen as excessive.

Subscription-based pricing gives customers access to EvolveWare's Intellisys platform on an as needed basis without any long-term commitments. The platform can be deployed for a month or for a number of years and anywhere in-between depending on the length of the project. Intellisys can be installed on a customer site, in the cloud, or can be hosted by EvolveWare.

With Intellisys, customers can analyze mainframe legacy code, understand interrelationships, complexity, dependencies, and mine business rules, all essential activities for complex rationalization and modernization projects.

"It is amazing how quickly the agency was able to document, modernize and create target specifications for this large mission-critical application when over 2 years had been wasted in failed attempts using other methodologies. The speed and cost at which this project was completed surpasses anything we have seen in areas on re-learning and documenting applications." UK Government Agency
