###

The Four'N Twenty Story:

The Four'N Twenty legend began in 1947, in a country town in Australia, when a crafty café owner named LT McClure hung out a sign encouraging customers to peer through a window and watch "the most delicious meat pies being made."

It didn't take long for these pies to become a national phenomenon. By 1956, thousands of these warm, flaky treats were being churned out by the hour and delivered to hungry, happy mates. Aussies became hooked on this new taste sensation as Four'N Twenty showed up in towns and cities across the nation.

But there was one destination that really stood out, a place that kept the orders coming, season after season: Football

Four'N Twenty pies became synonymous with being the "fan food" and the ritual of the game. In stadiums all across the country, you'd find tens of thousands of fans with a beer in one hand and a Four'N Twenty in the other.

Today, Four'N Twenty is a part of Australian culture and a national icon.
