Report Description:

Storage as a Service is a business model in which a large company rents space in their storage infrastructure to a smaller company or individual.

The impact of the Dodd-Frank Act on the storage market will be a key factor spurring the growth prospects for this market during the estimated period. Recently, in the global financial sector, a number of rules and regulations for swaps came into effect under the Dodd-Frank Act. This act has completely overhauled the global financial sector by promoting financial stability and creating transparency and accountability in the financial systems. Since sectors like utilities, chemical, mining, airlines, agribusiness, and commerce require the implementation of appropriate business, management, and technology tools, the need for the Dodd-Frank Act will increase as it mandates record keeping for business documentation purposes.

The Americas accounted for a market share of around 48% during 2017 and will be the largest region for this market until the end of 2023. In this region, the rising need for backup and data archiving in the cloud will lead to the strong growth of this market. In addition, the implementation of cloud-based storage solutions across industries like BFSI, healthcare, and education will also result in the growth of the market in the Americas.

This report focuses on the global Storage as a Service status, future forecast, growth opportunity, key market and key players. The study objectives are to present the Storage as a Service development in United States, Europe and China.
