

Registration opens for the 5th Future Armoured Vehicles Survivability conference and Active Protection Systems Focus Day

Smi reports: The 5th annual Future Armoured Vehicles Survivability Active Protection Systems Focus Day returns this Autumn in London

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, June 5, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- SMi's 5th annual Future Armoured Vehicles Survivability conference and Active Protection Systems Focus Day will return to London between the 12th-14th November 2019.

As the only armoured vehicle conference dedicated to the area of survivability, the 2019 event will gather programme managers, capability directors, and commanders from the military, and senior engineers, chief scientists, and platform managers from leading solution providers to discuss what nations are doing to protect their armoured vehicles and their personnel.

Building on the successes of 2018, SMi will once again host a dedicated pre-conference Active Protection Systems Focus Day on the 12th November 2019, which will provide detailed and exclusive insight into how leading nations are integrating APS into their existing vehicle fleets. Leading technical experts and militaries from the most forward-thinking nations will cover the Latest hard/soft kill systems, Modular Architecture, Sensors, Data Processing, Munitions and countermeasures, Capability Concerns, Technology demonstrations, Systems Testing and Trialling and much more!

On the 13th-14th November 2019, the two-day conference will aim to further address all layers of the survivability spectrum including: Armour, Situational Awareness, Concealment, Signature Management, IED Protection Systems, CBRN, Mine Resistance, Armour material technologies, Stealth, Active Protection Systems.

Whilst the full programme and speaker line-up currently being finalised, get a glimpse of what to expect this year by downloading the flyer: <http://www.favsurvivability.com/einpress>
