"If you want your business or ministry to grow, it must be heard. A powerful message is only good when it is received. The sound tech's ultimate responsibility is to ensure the organization's message gets where it needs to go clearly and with excellence," says Henry.

A veteran Sound Operator with over 20 years experience as the CEO of Open Sound Productions, Henry provides insider's tips, techniques, and seasoned advice to address the challenges that sound techs, their employers, and audience members face. These include venue selection, electrical issues, team building, leadership, communication skills development, hiring experienced and inexperienced people, training, and decorum. "Can You Hear It, Can You See It" is the companion manual to the workshop of the same name creates specifically for ministries and small businesses. However, it stands alone and is an excellent resource for those who are serious about being the best sound operator he/she aspires to be.

Bring Henry into your organization for a powerful sound presentation that will bring positive change that will be immediately experienced by those who hear it. Go to Henry's website https://www.HenryHasSound.com.
