Storied helps parents find fast, fun stories to read to their kids – which helps their brains

SAN FRANCISCO, CA, USA, June 11, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- There are apps that can help you get to where you're going and apps that can help you learn new skills. Now, there's an app designed to improve the cognitive development of children through reading.

Storied is now available on the App Store and the Play Store. The app (designed by Integral App Studio) is a compendium of hundreds of original stories penned by top children's writers from across the globe. Whether parents want a fun bedtime story to read to their kids or a story that helps reinforce a lesson they are already trying to teach, Storied is there to help with a searchable database of content approved by child development specialists.

Storied helps parents read relevant, entertaining stories to their kids

By bringing kids better stories, we're helping parents raise better children.”

Jay Huffman, Integral App Studio CEO

“Reading to kids for just five minutes a day has been scientifically shown to stimulate language and literacy centers of children's brains,” says Integral App Studio CEO Jay Huffman. “It's also been strongly suggested that children who are engaged in the reading process seem to benefit more strongly from the activity. Storied helps parents find new, fun and engaging content that will be relevant to the lessons they're already trying to teach their kids. By bringing kids better stories, we're helping parents raise better children.”

The app is designed with kids ages 3-11 in mind and is easy enough to use so that kids can read to themselves using their parents' tablets or phones as they grow older. The app also has a customizable bookshelf so parents can create reading lists for their kids. Storied will also have an option for users to submit their stories to the platform for author credit. The app allows parents to purchase individual stories or have unlimited reading through monthly or annual subscriptions.
