LONDON, GREATER LONDON, UK, June 28, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The cardiovascular drugs market expected to reach a value of nearly $86.67 billion by 2022, significantly growing at an annual growth rate of 1.2% during the forecast period. The growth in the Cardiovascular drugs market is due to increase in aging population, increase in the prevalence of cardiovascular diseases and availability of more generic drugs that reduce the cost of treatment. However, the market for cardiovascular drugs is expected to face certain restraints from several factors such as rising government interventions and rising safety regulations.

The cardiovascular drugs market consists of sales of cardiovascular drugs and related services by entities (organizations, sole traders and partnerships) that produce cardiovascular drugs to treat cardiovascular diseases. This industry includes establishments that produce anti-hypertensive drugs to prevent heart failure by controlling blood pressure and hypolipidemic drugs that reduce lipid and lipoprotein levels in the blood. It also consists of establishments, which produce antithrombotic drugs to treat arterial and venous thrombosis.

Trends In The Cardiovascular Drugs Market

NOACs are gaining wider acceptance and are replacing traditionally used anti-coagulants such as Warfarin and Heparin. Anti-coagulants have long been used in prevention of thrombus formation in patients suffering with cardiovascular diseases. Use of NOACs makes it easier for patients to continue therapy post discharge as opposed to injections of Heparin and Warfarin which need medical assistance for administration. Some of the NOACs include Pradaxa (dabigatran etexilate) from Boehringer Ingelheim, Xarelto (rivaroxaban) from Janssen, and Eliquis (apixaban) from Bristol-Myers Squibb.

Potential Opportunities In The Cardiovascular Drugs Market

The decline in the market is due to patent expiries of a major brands of cardiovascular drugs such as Lipitor, Plavi and others. Loss of patency has increased the market scope for generic versions of the drug with a huge difference in the prices.

Major players in the global cardiovascular drugs market include Merck & Co, Sanofi S.A, Pfizer Inc, Bristol-Myers Squibb Company, Novartis AG
