* Latest Update Related Domain (Packaging Industry) -

The packaging industry over the years has grown to experience from mere packaging. Today, consumption takes places on-the-go. Food producers, retailers, and consumers are looking for more convenient, fresher packaging solutions which have a minimal environmental impact. Packaging these days is equally vital as the product. After all, it is the packaging which ultimately influences a customer's decision of purchasing a product. The shift to e-commerce from brick and mortar stores is a swing in how products are getting labeled, packaged, and finally offered for sale.

In the ever-changing packaging industry, new trends come and go, needs and desires of consumers shift and evolve, while brands are always looking for a means of staying ahead in their markets. Flexible packaging is in high demand these days. Environmentally-friendly plastics have allowed the popularity of flexible packaging to multiply. Another trend that is boosting the growth of the packaging industry is sustainable packaging. Most brands have accordingly changed their packaging. Shower-friendly paper bottles made of seed phytonutrients is a good example. Some packaging brands are using paper and hemp instead of non-recyclable plastics. Packaging with a retro feel is another trend that has proven popular recently, especially in food and beverage products.
