

Root Engineers to Moderate Extraction Panel at NCIA Cannabis Business Summit

Michael Leavitt, professional mechanical engineer, will lead a panel of cannabis extraction experts through a facility design discussion

BEND, OREGON, USA, July 10, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Michael Leavitt, PE, a mechanical engineer for Oregon-based Root Engineers, has been selected to moderate a panel presentation at the upcoming Cannabis Business Summit & Expo hosted by the National Cannabis Industry Association in San Jose, CA. “Designing Your Extraction Facility for Success” will take place from 1:30-2:30 p.m. on July 24 in Executive G Room.

“Designing Your Extraction Facility for Success” will feature experts in extraction from across the industry discussing the different considerations that accompany the production of extracts. Panelists specializing in different methods of extraction will discuss important regulatory issues, common mistakes and complications when setting up a facility, and innovative new technology in the extraction industry.

My hope is that audience members will leave our panel with an understanding of the most important considerations to keep top of mind when producing cannabis extracts.”

Michael Leavitt, PE

“Starting an extraction facility is a complex process, and the industry is not quite at the point where a standard set of guidelines apply to each operation,” said Michael Leavitt, PE. “My hope is that audience members will leave our panel with an understanding of the most important considerations to keep top of mind when producing cannabis extracts.”

Michael Leavitt is experienced in engineering and design in the commercial, industrial and private industries in the cannabis space. His expertise in plumbing systems, hydronic systems and energy modeling make him a valuable member of the Root Engineers team. While Leavitt will moderate the panel, expert panel members include Gene Galyuk of Capna Systems, Vincent Collins of Code Unlimited, Jake Didion of Apeks Supercritical, and Julyn Andrews of Lunchbox Alchemy.

Cannabis Business Summit is the nation’s most influential, award-winning cannabis conference and trade show, hosted by the industry’s only national trade association. More than 10,000 industry leaders and entrepreneurs come together to learn best practices for maintaining a successful business and gain knowledge on emerging industry topics and policy issues.
