Styrene-butadiene rubber (SBR), a general-purpose synthetic rubber, produced from a copolymer of styrene and butadiene. Exceeding all other synthetic rubbers in consumption, SBR is used in great quantities in automobile and truck tires, generally as an abrasion-resistant replacement for natural rubber (produced from polyisoprene).

A large number of tire manufacturers are replacing the utilization of natural rubber with synthetic rubber. SBR is one of the least expensive synthetic rubber products available in the market. Our research analysis on the global styrene butadiene rubber market has identified the increasing demand from the automotive industry as one of the major factors that will have a positive impact on this market's growth in the coming years. There is an increase in the utilization of synthetic rubber such as SBR since it improves the tensile strength of the product and enhances its quality. The adoption of SBR will continue to increase in the manufacturing of passenger car and motorcycle tires due to its strong durability and rolling resistance. Moreover, SBR is also used in non-tire automotive applications such as gaskets, vibration isolators, tuned dampers, belts, bump stops, and spring aids.
