expected to reach a value of nearly $948.41 billion by 2022, significantly growing at a CAGR of 8.7% during the forecast period. The growth in the dairy market is due to increasing demand for cheese, yogurt and ice creams in emerging markets due to rising disposable income in developing countries, improved access to refrigeration in less developed countries, reduction in trade barriers between countries and growing consumer preference for healthy dairy products.

However, the market for dairy is expected to face certain restraints from several factors such as health awareness and shift towards vegan lifestyle.

The dairy market manufacturing consists of sales of dairy products by entities (organizations, sole traders and partnerships) that produce dairy products from raw milk and processed milk products, produce dry, condensed, concentrated and evaporated dairy, and/or produce some dairy substitute products. The companies in the industry package and distribute their products through various distribution channels to both individual customers and commercial establishments.
