While Knoll's history is rooted in classic mid-century modern design, the company is also known for their powerful partnerships with today's leading modern designers and their strategic brand development through acquisitions — case in point, Muuto.

Knoll CEO Andrew Cogan said, "Muuto products pair seamlessly with the range of modern Knoll designs, offering expanded breadth and depth of affordable luxury products that reflect today's evolving workstyles and trends in residential design, with particular appeal to a younger generation of architects, designers and clients."

Muuto is rooted in the Scandinavian design tradition characterized by enduring aesthetics, functionality, craftsmanship and an honest expression. By expanding this heritage with forward-looking materials, techniques and bold creative thinking, our ambition is to deliver new perspectives on Scandinavian design.

Muuto will present a selection of their newest additions of furniture, textiles and colorways. Brand representatives will be on site to assist architects, designers, residential and commercial clients with ideas for their interior spaces.
