/EINPresswire.com/ --

Bancassurance is a profitable partnership between a bank and an insurance company wherein the bank sells insurance products to its existing client base. Bank staffs are trained and assisted by the insurance company, who then become the point of contact and sale for the customer. The earned commission is shared among both the bank and the insurance company. While the bank is able to earn additional revenue through bancassurance, insurance companies can leverage the existing customer base of banks to reach out to larger customer base and increase sales. Bancassurance helps insurance companies expand without expanding their workforce. Bancassurance lets both insurers and banks to leverage each other's data, digital, and analytical capabilities to better address customer needs and boost revenue.

The traditional banking practice is being increasingly altered by various factors such as escalating customer expectations, the digital revolution, and traditional growth strategies becoming obsolete in the current era. In response, banks are adopting other strategies to drive growth and profitability. Bancassurance serves as a means to provide a multichannel and digitally connected experience to customers. In the recent past, a number of mergers have been witnessed between banks and insurance companies. For instance, In August 2019, SBI Life Insurance, a leading insurance company in India, and Indian Bank, an Indian state-owned financial services company, entered into a bancassurance pact to provide holistic financial planning solutions to the existing customers of Indian Bank. The partnership will ensure a greater reach and penetration of insurance solution to customers through over 2851 branches of Indian Bank spread across the country.
