Trends

Factors such as the increasing prevalence of obesity and diabetes coupled with the shifting focus of consumers towards healthy and fit lifestyles is fuelling the market for low-fat, and sugar-free food and beverage products. This trend has also hit the global ice-cream, and frozen dessert market and market players are increasingly focusing on introducing low-fat, sugar-free ice creams, and other products such as frozen yogurts, which is a healthier alternative for ice cream.

Regional Analysis

Geographically, North America has been assessed as one of the most significant regions of the global ice-cream and frozen dessert market and is expected to account for a substantial market share over the review period. This remarkable growth can be attributed to the well-established and flourishing food and beverage industry in the region, along with the presence of key market players. Furthermore, the early introduction of new and unique flavors and low-fat products has contributed towards the remarkable market share acquired from the region. This factor will continue to have an impact on the ice-cream and frozen dessert market in North America over the review period.

Europe also poses as one of the thriving ice-cream and frozen dessert markets in the world and is expected to account for a significant market share over the review period. The booming food and beverage industry in Europe, especially in countries such as France, Italy, and the UK, is one of the significant factors influencing the market growth over the review period. Moreover, the increasing consumption of the latest products launched in the global ice-cream and frozen dessert market in Europe is also driving the growth of the market over the review period.

The Asia Pacific is one of the significant regions in the global ice-cream and frozen dessert market and is likely to reach a fast growth rate, owing to the presence of developing countries such as India, China, Thailand, South Korea, which are primary market for the food and beverage industry, and especially for ice-cream and frozen dessert products. The growing demand for frozen yogurt, and unique, niche flavors such as matcha that cater specifically to the Asian population is expected to fuel the growth of the market in the Asia Pacific.
