LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, June 2, 2020

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Music is the language of the mind, body and soul, a concept Angelica Montaña has taken to heart throughout her budding music career. Montano's debut single, "Que No Daria," about unrequited young love, is available on all digital platforms Spotify, iTunes, Apple Music, Tidal, Google Play, and Amazon. Her sound is a nod to her Mexican heritage as a descendent of the Purépecha Indians.

As a songwriter and singer, she honors the legacy of the Purépecha Indians also known as Tarasco Indians. She achieves that by naturally blending tradition and contemporary to showcase the sounds that make Mexico special and vibrant. Born and raised in Whittier California, Montaña's Mexican roots run deep. Her parents are from Los Reyes Michoacán Mexico.

"My Purépecha heritage comes from several generations," said Montaña. "In my research about my family, I discovered that the Purépecha Indians, known for musical skills, were one of the most advanced civilizations of Native American tribes in Central America." Notable Mexican figures who claim the Purépecha Indian ancestry are NASA astronaut and inventor José Moreno Hernández , musician Don Pedro Dimas and Juan Mendoza, known as El Tariácuri, a Mexican singer of the Mariachi genre.

For as long as she remembers, Montañó has always expressed her passion for music. "My best childhood memory is when my parents sold paletas at the Pico Rivera Sports Arena," said Montañó. "It was a thrill to meet many Mexican singers backstage at these events." Pico Rivera Sports Arena, located in Southern California, is known for Latin entertainment and rodeos.

"I remember as a kid putting on headphones and blasting my Alejandro Fernandez, Mariachi Vargas, and Mariachi Sol de Mexico CDs and day dream of performing on a big stage with the best Mariachi band ever known," she said.

Watching performances of her idol Selena Quintanilla, Montañó was determined to develop the skills necessary to be on any stage. "Selena was my very first role model," said Montañó. "Selena inspired me at such a young age to be confident to sing and dance in the public's eye. Performing has always come naturally to me." You might say that was the beginning of her love affair with traditional Mexican music.

Last year, Montañó teamed up with Ismael Gallegos, a composer and singer-songwriter, to write the her single, "Que No Daria." Gallegos' music can be heard on TV and movie soundtracks such as the feature films, "Alpha Dog" and "A Walk in the Clouds". He wrote the theme song with Carmen Jara for the TV show "Who is Right."

Something about Mariachi music always warmed my soul, it felt like the melodies, harmonies, lyrics and arrangements running through my veins like fire.”

In addition to her advocacy for the preservation of her ancestry, Montañó fights for pets' rights. She plans to host a virtual performance "Celebrating the Joy of Music with Angelica - A Benefit Concert." The special event is described as honoring her great grandfather and to lift the spirits of the forgotten Purépecha Nation, as well as giving to the Best Friends Animal Society in memory of her beloved rescue pet Osita who died from cancer.

"I know the benefits of having a pet in my life and know the pain of loss," she said. "I wish I could save all animals who need a loving home and medical care." Best Friends Animal Society, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, operates the nation's largest sanctuary for homeless animals; provides adoption, spay/neuter, and educational programs.

An upside of COVID-19 was the surge of pet adoptions and fostering across America. "Companion pets are a blessing and I hope that people will appreciate the value of giving vulnerable animals a loving and safe home," said Montaña. "During this challenging time, remember music, hope and love is good for the soul and peace of mind."

"Through the public's support, my music sales, virtual and live performances will benefit other people and animals in need," she said.
