LONDON, GREATER LONDON, UK, September 10, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The rail transportation market expected to reach a value of nearly $521.15 billion by 2022, significantly growing at a CAGR of 8.7% during the forecast period. The growth in the rail transportation market is due to increasing connectivity in emerging economies such as India, China, and Brazil, increasing government investments, economical ticket pricing, and augmented use of big data analytics in railways during the forecast period. However, the market for rail transportation is expected to face certain restraints from several factors such as rising prices of energy and high investment with delayed return.

The rail transportation market consists of sales of rail transportation services by entities (organizations, sole traders and partnerships) that use trains to provide transport for passengers and/or cargo. Railroads operate either on networks with physical facilities, labour forces, and equipment spread over a wide geographic area, or operate over a short distance on a local rail line. This market excludes street railroads, commuter rail, urban rapid transit, and scenic and sightseeing train transportation.

Trends In The Rail Transportation Market

Rail transportation companies are using alternative energy sources to operate their rolling stock and stations. Alternatives for diesel include hydrogen and LNG (already being tested by some rail operators) that can be used to power trains. The use of alternative energy sources is primarily driven by growing environmental concerns due to climate change and rising fears of energy security. For instance, The Netherlands' national railway company Nederlandse Spoorwegen (NS) and electricity company Eneco is running all its trains on wind energy, since January 2017.
