With students from over 30 countries, Madrid based Quality Fly is an international school offering airline-focused training to prepare its students for today's competitive airline industry. The company's EASA-approved integrated ATPL training program instructs pilots with no or little flying experience to operate as an airline transport pilot on commercial aircraft. The school works closely with each student, starting from the first day of classes to the final preparations for securing employment.

"Due to Volotea's demanding admission process and the high level of knowledge required, Quality Fly has recommended candidates from our integrated ATPL course," said Juan Cervero, Managing Director Quality Fly. "Nonetheless, applications are also open to our modular MCC and ME-IR students. Several other candidates have also applied to the company, and they will be assessed in additional session on Volotea premises. Nationalities of the applicants include Spain, Italy, UK, Denmark and France."

Those interested in learning more about Quality Fly and its state-of-the-art commercial pilot training programs should visit the company's official website.
