LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, September 16, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- SMi's UAV Technology 2019 will open its doors in just two weeks' time

SMi reports: UAV Technology 2019 will commence in two weeks' time at the Copthorne Tara Hotel, London, UK on 30th September – 1st October

There are just two weeks left to secure your place at UAV Technology 2019, taking place in London on 30th September – 1st October in London. The conference is set to be the biggest yet where those who attend can network over 5+ hours, with over 24+ expert military and industry speakers and over 100 participants in the room.

The two-day meeting will provide a platform to obtain insights and network amongst leading nations at the forefront of unmanned technology such as the UK, US, Australia, France, Italy, Germany, Portugal and many more.

SMi's 2019 UAV Technology conference will aim to examine the latest unmanned aerial platforms being successfully deployed in multi-domain mission environments. This high-level international event will additionally address the development of the technology behind UAS, the utilisation of emerging technologies, the unmanned integration for existing legacy platforms, and the development of technologies aimed at countering UAVs – including swarm tactics.

Firmly established as the leading conference focused on UAV and C-UAS technologies, the 2019 event invites not only the programme managers, requirement planners in the land, air, and maritime domains, but also operational users and industry technical experts to share their knowledge and experiences in the enhancement of UAV and C-UAS technologies at this international symposium
