/EINPresswire.com/ --

Now when guests at Bucuti & Tara Beach Resort power up their workouts, they'll be powering up the resort. The addition of SportsArt ECO-POWR™ exercise equipment now produces electricity – instead of consuming it. This is the newest initiative in the resort's comprehensive wellness program.

Bucuti & Tara Beach Resort Fitness Centre

Bucuti & Tara's new line-up includes an electricity-generating indoor cycle, treadmill, recumbent bikes and upright bikes. The Caribbean's first carbon neutral resort features a contemporary Fitness Centre with floor-to-ceiling windows overlooking the white sands and turquoise waters of Eagle Beach – the very environment Bucuti is committed to preserving. By working out on this new equipment, guests simultaneously work towards their personal wellness goals while protecting the environment since there isn't a need to draw electricity.

How it works

Installing the new equipment is the same as traditional electricity-based workout machinery. Kilowatts generated by exercise are converted to AC power and sent back through Bucuti & Tara's power grid to offset consumption. The innovative technology harnesses up to 74% of human energy and converts it to utility grade electricity. Resulting in carbon negativity, this new ECO-POWR™ equipment lets guests produce more energy than traditional electric-powered gym machines consume.

Powered by human energy

A single workout can produce 160 watt-hours of electricity. For comparison, on average, 100 watt-hours can power:

- A 50" LED television for 4+ hours
- Power mobile phone (fully drained and recharged daily) for 18 days
- 12w LED lightbulb (60w equivalent) for 8+ hours
- For fun, it can even power asking Amazon Echo to tell jokes – 25 of them to be exact!
- Calculations are based on information including ElectricityPlans.com and Forbes.

Adding to the reward of guests knowing they're reducing their carbon footprint while lowering energy consumption, Bucuti & Tara also integrated fun new metric tracking for guests' workouts. In addition to tracking their own workout journey, the ECO-POWR™ cardio equipment featuring

SA WELL+ technology lets guests see energy production tracking, even featuring a leaderboard portraying the top energy producers, both locally and globally.
