Manufacturers and consumers are buzzing about adding cannabis in foods and beverages. Today the cannabis family has become legal, while derivatives from hemp such as the cannabinoid CBD are in high demand as CBD is popular as an aid for pain, anxiety, and relaxation. No wonder food and beverage companies are coming up with beverages and snacks that are dedicated to products containing CBD. In fact, CBD is easing its way into different beverages such as CBD-infused beer, lemonade, tea, cold-brew coffee, sparkling tonics, coconut tonics, cola, wine, and more.

There will also be a boost in the consumption of non-dairy beverages. Though drinks made from soy, coconut, and almonds are popular, consumers are likely to flock to those made from pecans, macadamia nuts, quinoa, hazelnuts, and flaxseed. Moreover, consumers will also be treated to tart beverages such as that which contains apple cider vinegar or hibiscus.

The F&B industry is facing a remarkable transformation and likely to develop further in the years to come.
