Cannabidiol is used in the production of medicines and food items. Cannabidiol is used in the production of various beauty and skincare products such as beauty creams, face masks, lip balms, and serums. Rising utilization of CBD in beauty products is likely to trigger the growth of the CBD market.

These days the hospitals and pharmacies are experiencing higher consumption of CBD infused drugs, which results in the legalization of medicinal cannabis in the regions like North America and Europe. This factor boosts global CBD market growth. The pharmacies provide CBD infused medicines, food products, and skincare products only when the consumer arrives with a legal prescription.

Cannabidiol products, especially vaping and smoking products, are becoming popular in European markets. Increasing hemp production along with growing demand for CBD rich hemp biomass is projected to enhance the market growth. Increasing adoption of refined CBD products coupled with increasing legalization of medical marijuana is believed to drive the product demand in the extended run.
