Description

The outbound medical tourism services market is anticipated to upscale at an impressive pace over the forecast period, as stated by 99Strategy in their latest report. Medical tourism is the mobility across international borders to receive medical conduct in some form, depending upon the availability of treatment in one's home-based country. This report has stated an overview of the industry chain structure and describes the industry landscape. Within medical tourism, travelers are people who prefer to travel to different regions and receive treatment for their disease or undergo a surgical procedure. These people usually travel to seeking high quality and advanced medical services.

Even though medical tourism provides a wide range of services to patients from weight loss treatment, fertility treatment, orthopedic treatment, and cardiovascular treatment, outbound medical tourism only comprises treatments like dental care, fertility treatment, and cosmetic surgery. The outbound medical tourism services market is driven by many factors such as growth in the per capita income and rising awareness towards fitness and wellbeing. Further, immediate treatment availability, along with higher affordability of medical facilities and the non-availability of low-quality treatment are fostering growth in the global outbound medical tourism services market in the forthcoming years.

Even though the demand in the outbound medical industry is rising significantly, there are various factors that are restraining the growth of the market over the forecast period. Unclear information about treatment centers is leading to hesitation among travelers due to risk of loss of life and organs. Further, expensive tours and other safety issues of the tourists is observed to hinder the growth of the global outbound medical tourism services market significantly.
