NEW YORK, NEW YORK, USA, October 2, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dr. Ross Greene, a former Harvard Professor and clinical child psychologist who developed an intervention model called Collaborative and Proactive Solutions visits the new Curlee Girlee Crackin' the Kid Code Podcast to share his insight on collaborative parenting. Greene outlines how how to reduce stress and bring harmony to your home. "Every parent can learn from Dr. Ross Greene," says Atara Twersky, founder of the curly girl movement and curleegirlee.com and host of the Curlee Girlee Crackin' the Kid Code Podcast. "I believe in his collaborative approach to parenting. As a mom of three myself, I've had experience with challenging behavior. We are all doing our best to navigate parenthood in a thoughtful and intentional way. Dr. Green's approach really does work."

Parenting takes center stage on Curlee Girlee's Crackin' the Kid Code Podcast

The episode is full of wisdom delivered in an informative and honest manner. "We enjoy interviewing our guests," explains Grace Cross, co-host, writer and owner of TheBabySpot.ca a global online magazine. "We know we don't know everything about parenting and we are always learning. We bring in amazing experts like Dr. Greene to give us stealth tools we can use in our everyday life."

We needed the kids to be involved in solving the problems," says Dr. Greene. "So collaborative approaches are proactive, not reactive or punitive."

In this episode, Dr. Greene shares his poignant and at times powerful insight into raising children today. As someone who has built systems to help parents of behaviorally challenged youngsters, Dr. Greene might surprise you with his approach. Enjoy the content of the podcast episode as you learn more about how to parent any child, difficult or otherwise, as all children have difficult moments. Dr. Greene explains how he came up with the methods he now teaches. "We needed the kids to be involved in solving the problems," says Dr. Greene. "If we can get people out of the heat of the moment, we can probably be in better shape. So collaborative is not reactive or punitive."
