AUSTIN, TX (September 26, 2019) — Emplicity’s founder and CEO, Vic Tanon has been elected to serve on the Board of Directors for The National Association of Professional Employer Organizations (NAPEO). Board members provide the much-needed oversight and leadership to the association and have been instrumental in growing the PEO industry to serve over 175,000 client businesses employing approximately 3.7 million employees since its inception in 1984.

We owe a great deal of our success throughout the years to NAPEO members and staff who provide the legal and educational resources Emplicity needs to take care of our clients the their employees”

While Tanon has experience in virtually every aspect of running a PEO, he sees great potential in branding and marketing the PEO industry. “People out there have heard the term PEO, but can’t quite articulate what we are and what we can do for them,” remarks Tanon who recently joined the Marketing and Communications Committee under the association’s marketing guru, Kerry Caruthers.

Starting Emplicity from its humble beginnings in Los Angeles 25 years ago, Tanon greatly benefited from the generous support of NAPEO members and leaders who were always willing to help. “We owe a great deal of our success throughout the years to NAPEO members and staff who provide the legal and educational resources Emplicity needs to take care of our clients the their employees.” Honored to participate on the NAPEO board, Tanon is looking forward to some positive developments in the industry while he serves. “All this great legislative work on the hill has set a firm foundation for us as an industry to take PEO to the next level.” He added, “I can’t wait to see where the next 25 years takes us.”
