

The First Lady of Burundi Received Three Global Awards for Serving Humanity Through I Change Nations

Dr. Clyde Rivers organized and facilitated the event where The First Lady of Burundi, Denise Nkurunzia was awarded three international global awards

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, USA, September 30, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- On Sept 23 at the OPAD office in New York City during the week of the 74th United Nations General Assembly. Dr. Clyde Rivers special envoy for OPED worldwide and founder of I Changed Nations organized and facilitated the event where The First Lady of Burundi, Denise Nkurunzia was awarded three international global awards for her service to humanity. The Buntu foundation, which is the brainchild of the First Lady has centered on development of orphans and widows in the country of Burundi. This foundation has created a vocational training program along with several other programs that is preparing the disenfranchised people of Burundi for the competitive job market in Burundi. The Organization has created Buntu radio, which is a radio station that allows the widows and orphans success story be heard all over the country. These stories are encouraging others all over the country to do better and a Television Network is on the way. This is transforming the country

The First Family in Burundi has also taken well over 20 orphans in to their home and made them apart of their family. The First Lady puts actions to her work to help the orphans and the poor in Burundi. This is heroic says Dr. Clyde Rivers, a first family leading the way for change.
