

Insurance startup warns rental car drivers "Next to zero credit cards cover injuries to other people"

DES MOINES, IOWA, UNITED STATES, October 1, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Bonzah.com owned by Pablow, Inc. (Pablow), an Insurtech startup based out of Iowa, has a warning for Americans that rent cars: if you get into an accident and hurt others, chances are you won't be covered by your credit card.

"To say renters get caught off guard is an understatement," said Steve Sherlock, Co-Founder of Pablow Inc. d.b.a. Bonzah.com. "Next to zero credit cards will cover injuries to other people or their property"

While rental car agencies do offer some liability coverage, they usually only go up to the state minimums, sometimes as low as $10K. In 2017, the average car injury claim cost $15K, according to the Insurance Information Institute, while serious accidents can cost thousands more. Without extra coverage, renters will be on the hook for injury to others above the state minimum.

Bonzah looks to fill this gap by making affordable Supplemental Liability Insurance available online. Through this app, consumers can buy extra coverage without facing the high costs at the rental counter. As fewer Americans own cars and have their own personal auto insurance, this on-demand supplemental rental coverage is more important than ever.

"We've had so many people ask for liability insurance given they don't own an auto and their credit card doesn't cover liability. We felt compelled to solve this problem, especially since I, as the founder, have the exact same problem. I haven't owned a car for the past 13 years!"

Travelers looking to buy supplemental rental car insurance can do so by visiting the www.Bonzah.com or download the the app from the App Store and enjoy "That Covered Feeling!"
