We just want families to enjoy spending time together without worrying about their children's safety.”

Clemence Chevrot, event organizer

Halloween has long been a favorite holiday and many adults fondly recall their best Halloween costumes and trick or treating in their neighborhoods. But in recent years the increase in crime on Halloween night has left many families reluctant to celebrate the holiday.

“We just want families to enjoy spending time together without worrying about their children's safety,” said Clemence Chevrot, the Community Affairs Director for the Church of Scientology

Flag Service Organization.
