Market Overview

Dextran is a high molecular weight polymer of glucose which is a complex branched glucan (polysaccharide made of many glucose molecules) composed of chains of varying lengths (from 3 to 2000 kilo Daltons). It is obtained from the fermentation of sugar beet sucrose with the bacterium Leuconostoc mesenteroides. Dextran is commonly produced from sucrose by using certain lactic acid bacteria of the family Lactobacillus. It has many uses and major demand in the pharmaceutical, agricultural, and food industries. In the medical field, it is used as an antithrombotic (antiplatelet), to reduce blood viscosity.

The world dextran market report includes market status and forecast of global and major regions, with the complete profile on the key manufacturers, their market shares and business data (capacity, sales, revenue, volume, price, cost, and gross margin). The market revenue (USD million) and volume (units million) and shares and the prices of each of the vendors have been covered in the comparative analysis. The report studies the market by product types, end industries and the market concentration in each of the key regions.

Another major aspect of the market taken into consideration by the report is consumption characteristics. This section covers the preference drivers in the market, substitutability, the market influence by strategy and development plans, and professional needs. In a market such as this, the manufacturing technology and raw material availability play an important role in the market dynamics. This report on the world dextran market is a comprehensive research report based on the market data taken from the years 2015-17 and aims at giving a forecast up to the year 2025.

Market Segmentation

Dextran being a chemical with enormous utility and user end applications, the grade, and quality of the chemical product also determines the market value and segment demand. The segmentation based on the product type would be T1-T10, T10-T70, and T70 and above. The figures represent the concentration level of dextran in the formulations and are used according to the required levels. The other segmentation in the market would be based on the end-user or product application and splits the market into Pharmaceutical, Agricultural, Food Industries, and others. The consumption volume depends on the scale of operations of the end-user.

Regional Analysis

The regional analysis of the global dextran market carried out in this report is based on the breakdown data collected from the key regions and their respective countries in the global market. The data collected and presented in the report covers the manufacturers' data, comparison of vendors, the presence of industries or factories, and total sales and consumption in these regions. The main regions and some of the countries covered in the report are North America (U.S., Canada, and Mexico), South America (Brazil and Argentina), Europe (Germany, U.K., France, Italy, Russia, Spain, etc.), and the MEA (Saudi Arabia and South Africa).
