

Foundation for a Drug-Free World Participates in Tampa Bay Humanitarian Film Festival

CLEARWATER, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, October 10, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- September 28th, The Foundation for a Drug Free World (FDFW) Florida chapter participated in the Second Annual Tampa Bay Humanitarian Film Festival by airing several short films and a feature film dedicated to raising awareness of the harm drugs can cause.

Included in the presentation was a moving story, Lauren: The Mental Effects of Drugs, by Daniel Shippey. This was an uncompromised depiction, with the backdrop of a haunting rock song about someone caught in the grips of narcotics addiction.

The Truth About Drugs Documentary screenings reveals harrowing facts about popular drugs from those who have abused them.

Letter to My Mother, by Branislav Janic, was a deeply personal tribute to mothers who also lost the battle with drugs but never lost the love of their children.

It was our pleasure to support these important artists. We respect their help to spread the truth about drugs through aesthetic presentations." Julieta Santagostino, President of FDFW Florida chapter Long Road to Recovery was an uplifting tale of an athlete's life that was once filled with potential, destroyed by drug use, then turned around through his own self-determination as well as help from caring friends and associates. That help was paid forward when the athlete provided aid to others headed down a similar path.

Jessie Posthumus' cleverly animated White Lines was a nearly confessional look at his falling prey to addiction and the challenges experienced seeking recovery.

Straight Edge: Behind the X may have been the most surprising of the presentations as Jordi Penner explored the Straight Edge Punk movement – a rock and roll style that strictly avoids any drug use by its musicians, or references to them in their songs.

Each of the above filmmakers, and the others not listed, showed exceptional craftsmanship in addition to forwarding vital messages.

"It was our pleasure to support these important artists," said Julieta Santagostino, President of FDFW Florida chapter. "We respect their help to spread the truth about drugs through aesthetic presentations."

Ms. Santagostino noted the pervasive nature of pro-drug messages throughout the culture, especially media and movies. That elevates the importance of these counter-messages that remind how harmful drugs are.
