Avocado and avocado oil have a lot of benefits, and many consumers have started incorporating it in their diet due to the high prevalence of chronic diseases and heart-related problems. Avocado oil has several benefits, including high protein content, antioxidants, soluble and insoluble fibers, good fats, and multiple minerals and vitamins. The growing consumption of avocado oil implies an uptick in the global avocado oil market in the forecast period 2015-2025.

Avocado oil is made from the pulp of avocado fruit, which is mostly cultivated in Central America and Mexico. As scientists discover the medicinal benefits of essential oils extracted from nutritional food, many people are using it in treating different health problems. This has led to the popularity of avocado oil across the globe. Moreover, there has also been an advancement in technologies to improve the taste, color, and flavor of processed food, which, in return, support its industrial growth prospect.

The food industry at large has received a boost due to growing consumer demand for several packaged foods and beverages. And with Avocado being one of the critical ingredients of these processed foods, the global avocado oil market is likely to boom in the stipulated period. Manufacturers are also looking at investing more in R&D of the avocado oil extraction process to improve the quality of oil, which will, in return, boost the demand in the global market.
