Pet food is very loved due to its high meat content and great taste which is available as wet, dry, snacks, nutritious and others in various forms like candies, small to large portions, various shapes and textures. There have been constant nutrition research and animal nutrition studies to facilitate the development of more enhanced products.

Demand Scenario

The global pet food market was USD 73.52 billion in 2018 and is estimated to reach USD 104.56 billion by 2025 at a CAGR of 5.16% during the forecast period

Growth by Region

Currently, North America dominates the market, accounting for almost 40% of the global food market. The market here, is driven by the expansion of production plants of leading companies and acquisitions to meet the rising demand from the nutritious pet food industry. Asia-Pacific is the fastest growing market and the demand for premium products has also increased, driven by the rising trend of keeping pets at home

Drivers vs. Constraints

The global pet food market is driven by factors such as rising disposable income, rising trend of nuclear families, rapid humanization of pets, and increased awareness about pet health. In addition, increase pet ownership in developing nations and an increase in e-commerce sales offer opportunities for the pet food market players. However, factors such as a rising number of allergy cases in human due to pets may hamper the growth. Also, growing concerns about pet obesity and pet food recall by companies hamper the growth of the global pet food market.
