Description: -

Heavy-duty vehicles include tractors, loaders, scraper, excavator, heavy trucks, combine harvester, and buses. The increasing penetration of plastic elements in heavy-duty vehicles is due to the high demand for lightweight vehicles and related lightweight components in vehicle products. Thermoplastic and thermosetting are the two types of plastics. The thermoplastic category mainly includes polyamide (PA), acrylonitrile butadiene styrene (ABS), and polycarbonate (PC); while thermosetting includes polyurethane (PU). They are the most important materials for plastic components in heavy-duty vehicle applications. Such plastics are extensively incorporated in the manufacturing of various components for heavy-duty vehicles.

The Global Plastic Component Market for Heavy-Duty Vehicles is earning much attention from several sectors, due to which it can assume a smooth run with 11.41% CAGR during the forecast period (2019–2025). During that time, its volume can develop from 137,143.0 Thousand Units in 2018 to 281,470.8 Thousand Units by the year 2025. Market Research Future's (MRFR) detailed report on the market has its focus on segments, drivers, and competitive analysis of the entire market. This can give a peek into the future market demography and allow market players in having strategies planned accordingly. Some of the components that need plastics to manufacture are engine cover, transmission cover, intake air modules, oil pan module, cam cover module, cluster panel/dashboard, bumper, seating, wheel & tire, door, interior & exterior trim, windows & windshields, and electronics. The consumption of vehicles is closely related to the growth of the functions of the end-use industries. For an instance, the construction industry is increasing due to the economic growth, continuous rise in population, favorable interest rates, and the ongoing investments in the public sector. Some of the heavy-duty vehicles used mostly in construction are bulldozers, dump trucks, backhoes, graders, trenchers, cranes, front loaders, excavators and construction trucks.
