Launched successfully last year, the focus day will explore key developments in LEO small satellite constellations and how we can exploit these networks to deliver more capability on the ground.

Bringing together over 100 delegates, including leading commercial solution providers, those at the cutting edge of small satellite R&D (including organisations from the Harwell Science & Innovation Campus) and government end-users - to discuss what future trends in constellation development might have here on the ground.

Focus day presentation highlights include:

- Mr Gary Lay BEng, Director of Strategic Opportunities, Surrey Satellite Technology Limited on 'Delivering the Disruptive: Future Launch & Development of Small Satellites'
- Mr Craig Clark MBE, Chief Scientific Officer and Founder, Clyde Space/AAC Clyde on 'Future Space & Disruption in the Satellite Market'
- Mr Mark Boggett, CEO, Seraphim Capital on 'Small Sats, Payloads and Data: Trends in Future Space'
- Dr Juan Reveles, Chief Technology Officer, Oxford Space Systems on 'Meeting the Challenges of the New Space Age'

The following day, Global MilSatCom Conference and Exhibition will then gather over 550

The poster features a dark blue background with the text 'Global MilSatCom' in large white letters. The 'o' in 'Global' is replaced by a white globe icon. Below the main title, there is an image of the Earth with a satellite in orbit. A purple banner across the Earth reads '21ST ANNIVERSARY'. To the right of the Earth, the text '5-7 NOVEMBER 2019 LONDON, UK' is written in yellow. At the bottom, a blue banner contains the website 'WWW.GLOBALMILSATCOM.COM'. The SMi logo is in the top right corner.
