Bow Wow Dog Houses' Palos Verdes Style Home

For Immediate Release:

LOS ANGELES (October 21) – Los Angeles-based Bow Wow Dog Houses has announced that they have updated their Palos Verdes dog house, which is part of their Signature Series of dog homes. The Palos Verdes house was originally designed using natural cedar inserts for the siding, but now can be constructed with Dura Temp siding materials that allow for a variety of paint options.

Styled in glassy midcentury modern, this home features a corner window for natural light and adds to the open feel of the floor plan. The Palos Verdes also features a side swinging door for ease of cleaning and added ventilation, and a swing open vent above the door.

The spacious style of home measures 37" x 67" with 41" in height in the interior. Flooring options for the house includes, linoleum, hardwood, and standard exterior grade plywood that is painted or stained to the desired effect.

Most of the options available for our Standard Series are available in the Palos Verdes model. Bow Wow Dog Houses welcomes customers to use the design options for the home that best suits their particular region, and that will ensure their pet has maximum comfort.

"The Palos Verdes style dog house is popular with our customers, mainly because of all of the natural light it allows into the house," said Larry Hobbs, President and CEO of Bow Wow Dog Houses. "Dogs love to lie in the sun, but sometimes they want to be in their cave, too. This style provides the best of both worlds to make for a very happy dog."
