ATLANTA, GA, UNITED STATES, October 23, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Radix Health, Inc., provider of patient access technologies, and One Touch Telehealth, provider of virtual telehealth solutions designed specifically to empower healthcare organizations, announced a new partnership to improve patient access among practice groups, hospitals, and health systems.

Through this partnership, One Touch Telehealth and Radix Health will help providers in improving patient access by offering a path to integrating physical and virtual appointment inventory to serve patients while optimizing provider utilization. One Touch Telehealth's platform offers seamless, easy-to-use telehealth capabilities while Radix Health's DASH platform allows providers to leverage those capabilities through its advanced scheduling, demand forecasting, and patient communications technologies.

"We're excited to partner with Radix Health in a shared effort to improve patient access for those who struggle the most to find care," says One Touch Telehealth's Co-founder and CEO Carrie Chitsey. "In working with shared clients, we'll not only help providers in accessing overlooked, and oftentimes untapped, markets in health care, but we can also allow providers to meet their patients virtually to meet the everchanging demands of instant and immediately healthcare."

"Health systems are thinking about ways to improve access with more urgency than ever before," explains Radix Health Co-founder and CEO Dr. Arun Mohan. "The DASH platform presents a great opportunity to expand access for patients, make it easier for providers to meet fluctuations in demand, and help large organizations to quickly respond to changing market conditions. This partnership will allow health systems to do just that with telehealth."
