PUNE, MAHARASTRA, INDIA, October 23, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ --

To gauge the demand for animal nutrients, it is imperative to examine the channels of such demand. According to the International Dairy Federation, the consumption of dairy products is expected to increase by 25 percent between 2015 and 2024. Dairy operations, matching their production with unprecedented demand, are increasing amino acid application and through disruption, increasing the growth of the Global Animal Nutrients market. Over the past century, the global population has quadrupled. Increasing disposable income among people has led to changes in dietary patterns such as the consumption of more food and meat.

Rising consumer awareness regarding adequate pet nutrition is giving a fillip to the market. The American Pet Products Association (APPA) states that 68% of U.S. households own a pet. The North American Pet Health Insurance Association (NAPHIA) announced that the total gross paid premiums reached $1.2 billion in 2017. This shows an upward trend for the Global Animal Nutrients industry.

Animal nutrients such as macronutrients, vitamins, dietary minerals, enzymes, eubiotics, and amino acids are the nutritional requirements of animals, and are crucial for the efficient production, development, and proper bone structures of animals to produce meat and milk. As has been witnessed in the past, amino acids play a pivotal role in the development of livestock. For several biological operations such as protein synthesis, transportation, and other nutrient processing, amino acids are needed. Quality food items dependent on animals such as meat, milk, and eggs are obtained by amino acid supplementation.
