Keith Ricketts, Vice President of Global Marketing at Sword GRC said; “Risk is present throughout a company's strategies, operations and processes. Often the silo approach of risk management leaves organizations with no overall view of the risks and no single management model that adequately monitors them.”

“Our workshop aims to provide participants with a blueprint for effective risk management strategies in a dynamic business and risk environment. Participants will learn about risk management strategies and techniques that they can apply to their own corporate and operational goals.”

Dr Ariane Chapelle, of Chapelle Consulting, has been active in operational risk management since 2000 and worked closely with both ING Group and Lloyds Banking Group; “Business is becoming more complex in a changing environment, with increased regulation, globalization and distributed operations, resulting in exposure to many more risks.

“This workshop has been designed to help managers integrate risk management into their organization as an integral part of strategy and operations. Delegates will be able to take back their learnings and create an integrated risk information architecture that will allow them to have a 360-degree knowledge of risk in their organization.”
