

The US Army to provide an exclusive update on the Integrated Tactical at Network Centric Warfare 2020

SMi Reports: Senior representative from the US Army will be presenting on the Integrated Tactical Network at the event in Rome, next year

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, October 24, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- SMi Reports: Senior representative from the US Army will be presenting on the Integrated Tactical Network at the event in Rome, next year

In recent news, the U.S. Army has prioritised the implementation of the Integrated Tactical Network (ITN) across the service.

Given the critical need for warfighters to be seamlessly connected to all levels of the military enterprise, the Army are vigorously executing this initiative to ensure a dynamic and secure network and communications environment. The U.S. Army's Network Cross-Functional Team will work with industry and academic experts, aggressively experimenting and prototyping new technologies to develop a seamless, secure and fluid network that soldiers can rely on in conflicts with any high-tech adversary.

The world's militaries are increasing their modernisation efforts by harnessing cutting-edge network technology across all branches and domains in order to achieve operational superiority.

With this in mind, SMi's Network Centric Warfare conference (Proudly sponsored by Glenair Italia) will cover the world's leading network modernisation initiatives including the Integrated Tactical Network, Tactical Edge Network, Mission Partner Environment, Mime Programme, and many more.

The conference is set to return in Rome for its 4th year, taking place on the 3rd – 4th February 2020. The highly anticipated conference is designed to enable programme managers, military professionals and industry experts to discuss and explore the latest developments, technology and opportunities across the world.
