

Ann Coulter Speaks on Impeachment, Women's Right to Vote & Why She's Called a Pundit on For the People on KCAA Radio

Now Available for Download on KCAA Radio and YouTube

LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, October 28, 2019 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Infamously outspoken Ann Coulter, author of over thirteen New York Times best-selling books, enjoyed an interview on KCAA Radio's law-themed show, For the People, hosted by Judge Herb Dodell and Gary Garver, speaking on impeachment, the country's divide, why she feels women shouldn't have the right to vote and why she's called a pundit.

"They call me a pundit just so they don't have to call me a bestselling author," quipped Coulter.

Coulter, who voted for President Trump, said she enjoys his passion and honesty on Twitter.

"I like that the president is so transparent," said Coulter. "What's great about his tweeting is you get a bird's eye view on what the president is thinking. We pretty much know it all, just follow him on Twitter."

Controversial Best-Selling Author Ann Coulter on KCAA Radio's For The People

About Judge Herb Dodell:

When I decided to write a book, my wife, Shelli, asked me two questions. Why was I writing it and for whom? After a great deal of thought and introspection the answers were clear. I wanted to use my many years of experience as a trial lawyer and the experience I was getting as a judge to help the public deal with the anxieties and stresses that come from an involvement with the legal system. Most people know little about how the legal system really works. When exposed to it, they are faced with anxiety over what to do and fearful about the uncertainty over what to expect, how to get the right lawyer, their exposure and the expense. What is likely to happen? This is an emotional time. Knowing what to expect and how to deal with it is reassuring. For some, they just want to learn about the legal system. The book provides information for them. For those caught up in the legal system or who are about to get caught up in it, whether it is small claims court, restraining orders, general litigation, an eviction or a criminal matter, my intention is to give them practical guidelines from someone who has been there from the day-to-day battles to the perspective of the judge. What can they anticipate? What should they do? How should they deal with it? This book will tell them what they need to know so that they can navigate the legal system and make better choices. Much of what happens is ego dominated. By using the spiritual technology outlined for each subject they can reduce or eliminate the chaos and uncertainty and replace it with order and fulfillment. The result is less anxiety and stress plus a saving of time and money. The stories and cases provide illustrations about what can happen. The bottom line is that I wanted to provide a book that was informative, entertaining, practical and with a spiritual component.
