

Last chance to register for the only event that approaches the concept of information warfare in the maritime domain

SMI reports: Registration is closing soon for SMI's 3rd Annual Maritime Information Warfare Conference in London, next week

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, November 11, 2019 / EINPresswire.com/ -- The 3rd Annual Maritime Information Warfare conference will commence in London on the 18th-19th November 2019 and registration for the event will soon be closing, with places becoming increasingly limited. Maritime Information Warfare is the only place that will give delegates exclusive insights into the strategies, systems, and new technologies to increase information warfare capabilities, as well as the challenges associated with engaging in information warfare.

The two-day meeting will feature more than 14 senior military and industry expert-led presentations, over 35 industry peers from across the world, a panel debate on the different ways NATO nations unify information warfare to improve interoperability and around 5 hours of dedicated networking time.

For those interested in attending the event next week, it is advised to register soon to secure a place. Register online at <http://www.maritimeinfowarfare.com/einpr11>

This year boasts an exceptional speaker line-up with Vice Admiral (Ret'd) Duncan Potts, Former Director General Joint Force Development, Joint Forces Command as the conference chairman.

Delegates will hear senior military and industry expert-led presentations from:

- Commodore Ian Annett, Assistant Chief of Staff Information Warfare and Chief Information Officer, Royal Navy
- Captain Matthew McGonigle, Commodore, Littoral Combat Ship Squadron One, US Navy
- Captain Timothy Unrein, Operations Intelligence, NATO MARCOM
- Captain Alfred Turner, Joint Military Operations Specialist, US Naval War College
- Commander Lee Atkinson, Directorate of Naval Requirements 6, Communications, Information
