Overview:

Dental software has changed the outlook of the global dental industry. This software is packed with information to perform the routine administrative duty of dental practitioners. It is also well equipped to serve a dental clinic, where multiple practitioners are working or for any hospital where the required data are synchronized with the existing hospital setup. Dental software helps any organization to go "paperless". This software is available in the market since 1980s, yet few practitioners have considered using it. The dental software market, however, has witnessed a surge in recent years.

Recent studies are showing that solo practitioners, as well as group clinics, are using dental software to help in getting their clinics structured in proper way. Resources can be utilized more efficiently. Dental software helps in synchronizing online patient booking, patient profiling, prescriptions, dental billing, stores dental images and treatment records and many other functions. It also helps in developing reception and patient management. These functions cover many segments that are required to operate a clinic on regular basis. This software also provides support to dental colleges where dental management courses are studied. One more important aspect is that dental software can be programmed according to individual needs.

The dental software market has offered a digital solution to increase the efficiency of any organization. However, obtaining or maintaining operational licenses are proving to be cumbersome for many. Maintaining several licenses for an office is a tough task. The availability of dental software on cloud platform, as software as a service (SaaS) has resolved the issue to a greater effect.
