The CBD Oil sector comprises a large part of the overall expenditure of countries, with the CBD Oil sector in the U.S. accounting for a whopping 17.9% of the overall GDP in 2016. The CBD Oil sector in the U.S. is a major global leader, due to the strong presence of major pharmaceutical manufacturers and medical device developers. Other developed countries also spend a significant part of their GDP on the CBD Oil sector, with Switzerland spending 12.4% of the GDP, and Germany, France, Sweden, and Japan all spending around 11%. The CBD Oil sector has, strangely, even become a maypole for nationalism in the UK, where NHS spending was a key point in the argument to exit from the European Union.
