"While CBD can help with anxiety, sleep, pain, inflammation and other challenges, we wanted to continue to explore the benefits and inspire the industry with the development of CBD and plant-based stem cell skin care products", said Verve CEO Tim "TK" Klund.

“

We are continually looking for new biotechnologies to combine with CBD. Skin is the largest organ of the human body and being able to nourish, enhance, and protect it just makes sense."

Kiran RajBhandary

"Our existing customers vary from athletes to veterans, and those who suffer neurological challenges", stated Klund. He continued, "We know there is a wider application for CBD. The opportunity to combine other beneficial materials for a wider range of people and educate them on the benefits of CBD is how we will continue to lead the industry".

"Expanding our solutions... creating and launching a new brand, developing new relationships and meeting the needs of the public is in alignment with our wellness purpose" stated RajBhandary. "We are continually looking for new biotechnologies to combine with CBD. Skin is the largest organ of the human body and being able to nourish, enhance, and protect it just makes sense", he added.

"Give your skin some love", concluded RajBhandary, "it is our VITALITY by Verve tag line, and for good reason".
