Financial services, on the other hand, are services offered by organizations dealing with money management like investment banks, insurance companies, banks, stock brokerages, and credit card companies. Financial services deal with real estate, agency services, and securities, and every type of financial intermediation. The recent emerging trends in this sector emphasizes the deployment of mobile and web connectivity and attack risks from online hackers and attackers. Previously, banking services relied on brick and mortar to facilitate money transactions. With the introduction of mobile apps, the BFSI industry has welcomed financial services to the customer's doorsteps. Customers these days do not require to visit the bank in person. The financial services sector is highly adopting blockchain technology as this technology provide benefits in terms of security as well as operating costs.
