This year's Food On Demand Conference will bring together foodservice's key players and experts in mobile ordering, third-party delivery and catering providers, packaging, robotics and drone technology to help restaurants increase efficiency, drive incremental volume and develop profitable off-premises programs.

This year's agenda is being expanded to three days and will include a special keynote presentation from Postmates CEO and Founder Bastian Lehmann, one of two keynote speakers on the agenda. The conference will also include insight from national and independent restaurants, ghost- and virtual-kitchen operators, foodservice packaging manufacturers and consumer analysts at the intersection of food, technology and mobility.

Additional agenda items include a panel unveiling an exclusive consumer survey of national third-party delivery providers, best practices from independent and franchised restaurant operators, Google and Coca-Cola on their growing interest in the restaurant space, and a luncheon presentation with Matt Sweeney, the CEO of drone manufacturer Flirty.

With mega-tech brands now entrenched in the delivery market, waves of investor cash continue to fuel innovation and expansion of delivery footprints, new restaurant formats including ghost and virtual kitchens, this year's Food On Demand Conference will provide the most detailed look at the future of foodservice with the opportunity to interact with leaders across all facets of the industry.
