Segmentation

The market for global medical packaging can be segmented based on the end-user and product type.

Based on End-User, the market can be segmented into:

Pharmaceutical
Medical Devices

Based on the product type, the packaging market can be segmented into:

Pouches
Bags
Clamshell Packs
Trays
Syringes
Caps and Closures
Blister Packages
Cartons, Boxes and Containers
Other Products

Among these segments, the blister packages segment is the most important and popular format and is also expected to have the highest growth in the upcoming years. Though blister packaging is used for devices like catheters, injection syringes and other medical instruments, it is most popularly used in pharmaceutical product packaging. This segment is popular because it provides seal integrity and a high degree of the microbial barrier, and also protects medication from moisture as well.

Regional Analysis

The global market for medical packaging can be classified regionally into – North America, Europe, Asia-Pacific, Latin America, Middle East Asia & Africa. Currently, North America dominates the segment and is said to continue to dominate in the forecasted period as well. The main reason for this is the strong presence of the pharmaceutical and medical device manufacturers in the country, the research and development that has been increasing over the past decade or so.

However, the Asia-Pacific region is expected to grow at the highest CAGR in the next few years due to the growing population, growing economy, and increased demand for better healthcare infrastructure.
