The global diet supplement market is driven by erratic and stressful work schedules and the alterations in the diet consumption schedules. These factors also expedited the selling of dietary and nutritional supplements throughout the globe in the form of tablets, powder and fluids. Also, the increasing influence of microencapsulation in the pharmaceutical industry is likely to drive dietary supplement manufacturing companies to use capsule dosage forms over the forecast period— It is essential to ensure the standard colour characteristics and the overall quality of the finished product. Enhanced energy and weight control are expected to remain the dominant application segment throughout the forecast period due to increased knowledge of fat reduction and emphasis on increasing adult food intake.

Accelerated urbanization, a significant surge in the disposable income, and heightened consumer awareness of health issues are expected to drive Global Diet Supplements Market growth in the coming few years. Because of the high pervasiveness of cardiovascular diseases, demand for weight management services, and a favourable outlook for medically backed nutritional supplements are projected to propel consumer demand. Apart from this, the consumer behaviour to the potential health and wellness benefits is highly encouraging concerning dietary supplements. Growth in the geriatric population, skyrocketing healthcare costs, emerging lifestyle, food reforms, medical advancements, and higher price have accelerated both the overall growth of the industry and the product demand.

The report covers a detailed competitive outlook that includes the market share and company profiles of key players operating in the global market. Key players profiled in the report include BASF SE, Amway Enterprises, Glanbia PLC, Bayer AG, GlaxoSmithKline Limited and more.
