Book helps put the youngest of first-time barbershop customers at ease

LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, January 2, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Author Fallon Ward has been on a mission to make the barbershop experience for children a more comfortable one. The South Carolina author is using her book, "Happy Harry Gets His First Haircut," to do so.

Ward says the children's book is the true story of her son's first haircut. It was written with the aim of creating therapeutic and calming moments during a child's first trip to a barbershop. She added that the book can serve as a liaison for children and their first experience because it's a comforting mechanism for boys who may be anxious.

"I decided to tell this story because no one else has done so, and I felt that it was extremely important," explained Fallon Ward. "Never seen a book for African American boys that addresses their first haircut. It's a significant part of their lives."

"Harry" is the name of the main character and was inspired by the memories of the author's childhood friend, Harry Phelps. Colorful and captivating illustrations of the story's characters depict the Harry exemplifying bravery while going through the process of getting his first haircut.
