

Rod Carlson Named as Interim CEO at Living Well Disability Services

Previously serving as COO, Rod Carlson appointed interim CEO and president after over 30 years with Living Well Disability Services

MENDOTA HEIGHTS, MINNESOTA, UNITED STATES, January 21, 2020 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Board of Directors of Living Well Disability Services, a leader in providing exceptional services for people impacted by disabilities, has appointed Rod Carlson to serve as Interim President and CEO following President and CEO Julie Manworren's resignation. The Board has begun the search process for the next President and CEO of the organization. Carlson began serving as Interim President and CEO on January 16, 2020.

Carlson has more than 34 years of experience supporting people with disabilities, most recently as Chief Operating Officer of Living Well Disability Services. He is fiercely committed to advocating for the needs of the people we support. He brings valued experience from his work with several organizations working for disability rights, including as an ARRM board member, ALTAIR liaison, and ANCOR State Representative. Rod's leadership during this transition will be focused and bring a fresh perspective.
